1 BACKGROUND INFORMATION

1.1 Country overview

Montenegro is a country located in South-Eastern Europe; the capital is Podgorica. Montenegro has an area of 13 883 square meters and a population of approximately 613,100 inhabitants. Montenegrin is the official language of the country, other languages such as Bosnian, Croatian, Serbian and Albanian are also used officially. Montenegro is a parliamentary republic and gained its independence from Serbia in 2006. Presidential elections will be held in March and April 2023. Montenegro has a GDP of 5.9 billion USD. Inflation has been significant but its effect on the cost of living was limited. High public debt and a deteriorating global environment require the country to pursue fiscal consolidation and reforms.

Negotiation for the accession of Montenegro to the EU began in June 2012. To this date, 33 negotiating chapters are opened, of which three have been provisionally closed. Montenegro continued to implement the Stabilisation and Association Agreement (SAA). Concerning chapter 19, related to Social Policy and Employment; EU rules in the social field foresee minimum legal labour standards, equality, health and safety at work and non-discrimination and aim to promote social dialogue. The EU Commission declared in its 2022 report that Montenegro has some level of preparation in the field of social policy and employment. In 2023, Montenegro has been advised to continue the reform of the social protection system based on the Roadmap of Social Protection Reform. Montenegro should adopt and implement the strategy of deinstitutionalisation. On the de-institutionalisation of children in care, no progress has been made towards the transition to community and family-based services: professional foster care has not been introduced and the adoption of the Strategy on de-institutionalisation is still pending.

1.2 Sector situation

The Center is a public institution that performs social and child protection activities following the Law on Social and Child Protection, the Family Law, the Decision on the Organization of Public Institutions of Centers for Social Work and the Center's Statute. The CSW is in charge of providing counselling and mediation services. It also drafts opinions in cases involving child welfare protection and custodial disputes. More precisely, within the CSW, the Service for Children and Youth provides child protection services in the form of counselling and guardianship to children and youth. The Center provides services for children and young people, adults and the elderly, material benefits and legal affairs, financial-administrative and technical affairs. The Service for material benefits and legal affairs, work on provision of material benefits. The Service for Financial-Administrative and Technical Affairs carries out work related to financial-accounting and related activities enabling the realization of the Center's activities.

Last year, the center provided services for

- divorced marriages - 102 cases
- regulating contacts between parents and children - 73 cases
- disturbance within marital relations - 132 cases
- modification of the decision on entrustment of children - 31 cases
- entrustment of children from extramarital union - 37 cases
- supervision over the exercise of parental rights - 14 cases
- restriction of parental rights-25 cases
- deprivation of parental rights-19 cases
- custody for special cases – 62 cases
- counseling – 400 cases

1.3 Role of partner institution in the sector

Among the tasks performed by the staff of the Center for Social Work are counselling and mediation.

In each case, it is necessary to determine what specifically constitutes the best interest of the child. The criteria that the Center for Social Work are guided by are numerous and none of them has an objective advantage over the others. Some of them are: ensuring the safety of the child, personal characteristics of the child, emotional needs, i.e. the emotional ties of the child, which parent is more suitable for exercising parental rights (that is, who is more ready to encourage the contact of the child with the other parent), the principle of continuity, points of view, opinion and the wishes of the child. Contact between siblings and conditions for learning and development are also taken into account.

All these are general guidelines as criteria differ in importance in each specific case.

Important challenges faced by the CSW are :

- o Imprecisely defined law

Contact under controlled conditions at the contact room of the Centre for Social Work is not specifically recognized in the Montenegrin Family Law and Strategy for realising children's Rights 2019–2023, and in the Protocol on Treatment, prevention and Protection from domestic violence, the Law on Social and Child Protection. There's no existing protocol on how to proceed. This would be necessary to ensure consistency and uniformity, currently there is no time limit (controlled visitation can last from 3 to 6 months). Each case is viewed without taking into consideration its singularity.

- o Unequally trained personnel and staff

In every Centre for social work, personnel and staff act at their own discretion. It doesn't mean that they do not give the best of themselves but when one family is followed by three, four and more different personnel it can be assumed that social workers don't apply uniform processes and cannot assess the child's best interest.

This results in challenging issues. CSW is working without providing training for its staff.

CSW's law and protocol don't rule that CSW should give an opinion to the court before the end of the supervision period.

Additionally, it does not rule that CSW should propose to the court the termination of supervised visitation and the termination of parental rights.

CSW does not have specific skills for monitoring personal progress and the development of the relationship between parents and children.

- o Development of social protection and inclusion

According to the report of the European Commission on chapter 19 of the EU acquis ; to continue the reform of the social protection system based on the Roadmap of Social Protection Reform ; it is needed to develop the capacity of social workers who are dealing with different dysfunctional families.

It is important to note that sometimes social workers themselves, through counselling and therapeutic work with family members, decide on models for improving relations between them. Special emphasis is placed on seeing parents with children during and/or after high-risk divorces. High-risks divorces refers to situation involving domestic violence or threats of violence, as well as situations where spouses or parents are addicted to alcohol or psychoactive substances.

The court decision is always based on CSW's recommendation (CSW's staff prepare a manual that will be the guide for CSW's opinions before the court). During family proceedings, the court is also guided by the regulations in the field of social and child protection.

3 METHODOLOGY

3.1 General methodology (of the action)

The CSW faces challenges due to lack of uniform process when it comes to staff training and professional practices (risk assessment for the courts in case of custody dispute, controlled visitation, etc...). The aim of the action is to analyse the current practices in place (namely practices related to counselling, family mediation and child protection services) at the CSW and to support harmonisation efforts. The action will identify the challenges faced by the partner and provide knowledge on EU best practices. At the end of the action the partner should have a clear picture on one hand on areas of improvement and on the other on practices from the EU that could be transferred and adapted as an answer to challenges faced by the CSW.
